

Autism is a power not a weakness

By Tiggy Nelson

Some people see the world in a special way
They notice things others might not say
Their brains are wired just a little bit different
And that makes them unique and that's just excellent
They may like things quiet and still
Or they may like things loud and shrill
They might have friends that are toys, books and games
And that's ok, because everyone's got their own claims.

Some people might need a little extra time
To figure things out or to make a rhyme
They might see patterns or hear sounds so fine
And that's what makes them unique, one of a kind
They might have passions bright and bold
Like Art or Music or stories to be told
But that's ok, because that's what life's all about.

So don't be afraid to stand and shout
Let's all celebrate the differences we see
And be kind to each other, you and me
Because when we accept each other's quirks and all
We'll find that everyone's amazing, standing tall!
